Peabody, and of Howard, of Baltimore, nothing like this benefaction is known to the public. That of the Astors, of McDonough, of New Orleans, has been California, reverted to his family by decisions of the courts of his State, which held him to be insane. Mr. Lick, like the venerable philanthropist, Peter Cooper, of New York, and Mr. Lenox, who has recently established in the same city a library and museum, intends that his gifts shall neither be the subject of debate with trustees or litigation in the courts, and so he selects seven gentlemen, well-known citizens of California, to whom he conveys all payment of certain sums to his relatives and friends, and an annuity of twentyfive thousand dollars to himself, to be held in trust for the purposes named. These gentlemen are T. H. Selby, D. O. Mills, H. M. Newhall, William Alvord, G. H. Howard, James Otis and J. O. Earl, to whom, as we learn from an abstract from records of deeds, there has been transferred fifty lots and houses in San Francisco, three lots in San Jose, his homestead near San Jose of one hundred and three acres, one hundred and Placer county and Catalina county of though one of the first questions disfifty acres near Alviso, and a tract in about fifty thousand acres, off the coast

$9,000,000 We congratulate California upon this munificent gift and upon the possession of a citizen who thus so nobly illustrates the stewardship of wealth. congress. Therefore, he says, it signibeget? If it were promotive of Tennessee's good, Tennessee would approve it. Because it delights the senator it does not follow that it would electrify everybody with social pleasures it is designed to make ecstatic. Or is it true that the distinguished Mississippian, confessing that his State is thoroughly blacked, would have ours subjected to the handiwork of the same coarse colorist. He knows that no white people will enter, and that all within the confines of Mississippi will escape whenever this domination of blacks becomes as perfect in social as it is in political life; and he is surely cognizant of the fact that the south deems no practical boon equivalent to that which may induce white agricultural populations to enter the country. This civil rights bill, as it would operate in the south, closes the door against immigration and renders growth in wealth and population impossible. If a great calamity have betalien Mississippi, as all confess, as we see it illustrated in every incident of the Sinte's deplorable fortunes—even in the defeat of Alcorn when recently a candidate for the governor's place, and in intolerable burdens of taxation-if these evils came of the absence of whites and supremacy of blacks, why should Alcorn seek to fasten upon the whole south a system of laws inflicting upon the south every calamity that has bea fox that lost its tall in a trap. In a tions. senate of foxes he sought to have all foxes subjected to the same absurd surwhite race.

The opening of this canal, if it make New Orleans always accessible by ships drawing twenty-five feet, will reduce the cost of transfering wheat to Europe certainly twenty cents per bushel; it compels the new northwest to build the Kansas City and Memphis road; it turns backward toward the Mississippi the tide of the country's wealth now his property, chargeable only with the drawn from the Mississippi; it aggrandizes each city on this arm of the sea called the Mississippi. By all means, if we cannot have a perfect ship-canal, from deep water even to New Orleans, boats even if we must have the tugboats. The latter will not tax steamships, and can only prey, we are told, upon sailing vessels. The Fort St. Phillip's canal is infinitely better than nothing, and surely the west and south should be grateful for very small favors.
